Brailsford & Dunlavey Elevates Three Leaders to Executive Vice President Level

Will Mangrum, Brad Noyes & Jeff Turner to Lead Program Management Firm's Continued National Expansion

(Washington, DC) -- Program management firm Brailsford & Dunlavey has announced the recent appointment of Will Mangrum, Brad Noyes and Jeff Turner, each to the role of Executive Vice President.

All three will join founders Paul Brailsford and Chris Dunlavey as principals of the firm, and their elevation comes as B&D continues to grow its national practices in the higher education, K-12, municipal and sports venue sectors. An upcoming office opening in Northern California will be the firm's second on the west coast, and 11th across the country.

"Will, Brad and Jeff have been major drivers of the growth we've experienced, and we're excited about what lies ahead," President & CEO Paul Brailsford said. "More important, though, is the way that they represent B&D -- both in their commitment to our clients and in growing the next generation of firm leaders."

Mangrum heads up B&D's K-12 and Municipal Facilities practice groups, including B&D Venues which focuses exclusively on sports and assembly venues. Members of these groups serve as owners' representatives on some of the largest school construction and stadium development initiatives across the country.

Noyes and Turner co-lead a Higher Education practice group that has experienced rapid growth across the country over the past 18 months. The group's traditional planning assignments are now complemented with development advisory work on many college and university public-private partnership (P3) projects.
